More than 6.4 billion people live on our planet, over one billion—more than 1 out of 6—live in extreme poverty. Extreme poverty is defined as living on less than 1 US dollar per day. In 2000, approximately 2.7 billion people were living on less than 2 dollars a day. (Source: World Bank)

In general, poverty is decreasing. Between 1960 and 2000, life expectancy in developing countries increased by almost 20 years, from 46 to 63 years old. Life expectancy only increases when poverty decreases. Some developing countries such as Thailand and India have economies that are improving and are becoming stronger and stronger every year. However, you might be surprised to learn that there is more child poverty in the USA than in any other industrialized country.

For other countries, especially in sub-Saharan countries, poverty is still a serious, daily danger. There, hope for the future has been decreasing. In that part of Africa, 46 million children could not go to school in 2004. And still, all over the world, 852 million people out of 6.4 billion go to bed hungry every night. That's a ratio of 1:7.5! It's more than the population of the USA, Canada and the European Union put together. Today, 1 in nearly 7 people do not get enough food needed to be healthy and lead an active life. Therefore, together hunger and malnutrition are the number one risk to worldwide health—greater than AIDS, malaria, and tuberculosis combined.
