(A) What is it that even the financially poorest person can give generously and that even the richest person still needs? Furthermore, it may be offered for a minutely brief moment, but its effects can last a lifetime. Finally it is priceless. The answer is: a smile. Interestingly, there are two kinds of smiles-voluntary and involuntary. A newborn child may be noticed grinning, often after the first few weeks of being born. Since at that age a newborn cannot yet discern the funny from the serious, such smiles are involuntary and are simply a reflex of workings of the central nervous system. However, from about six weeks onward, a toddler's smiles may be more in response to a familiar voice or face. Doctors and scientists marvel at the effects of a simple smile, not only on the one receiving it, but on the individual producing it. Speech therapists report that the mere gesture of smiling produces an electrical stimulus that affects the pituitary gland. Following, this gland emits endorphins that make us feel better. Therefore, a smile a day can keep the doctor away.

41. What is the main idea of this passage?

(A) The phrases of growth of a newborn baby.

(B) The scientific findings by speech therapists regarding the disadvantages of smiling.

- (C) The interesting and beneficial phenomenon of smiling.
- (D) The similarities in needs of the impoverished and the affluent alike.

(E) The smile differences between a newborn baby and a toddler.

42. What is/ are the key word(s) of this passage?

- (A) Priceless.
- (B) Newborn.

(C) Courage.

(D) Endorphins.

(E) A smile

43. What is the passage really trying to convey?

(A) The more one smiles, the greater its effect on the one smiling and others.

(B) A newborn's smiling within the first few weeks of life should not be taken as voluntary.

(C) The gesture of smiling results in the decreased release of endorphins by the pituitary gland, making one feel better.

(D) That smiling has endless value and is needed often by newborns on the part of their parents.

(E) A toddler's smiling should be taken as involuntary.

44. What might those who are often stern think about after reading this passage?

(A) They should consult a speech therapist to learn how to smile.

(B) They are not bettering their health by being so serious.

(C) They should pay more attention to the smiles of their newborns.

(D) They should seek out poor people and give to them generously.

(E) They should persuade rich people to be happier.

45.What would be an appropriate title if this were a magazine article?

The U.S. president is turning his focus to the country's economic malaise. His plan to fight unemployment includes a huge tax cut, and that's drawing opposition from lawmakers and from taxpayers. Chris Burns reports.

Wrapping up a domestic version of shock and awe, President Bush now aims to push his tax-cut bill through Congress. (It is) part of a nationwide blitz. Mr. Bush is riding his lofty poll ratings from the Iraq war as he battles Democrats and moderate Republicans over a tax plan intended as an economic shot in the arm.

(Bush is trying) to avoid the regime change his father, President Bush, suffered when he won the Gulf War, but lost to Bill Clinton on the economy. In his weekend radio address, the president called on Congress to approve the package originally set At $726 billion in tax cuts over 10 years. The House proposes 550 billion and the Senate, 350.

GEORGE W. BUSH, U.S. PRESIDENT

Some members of Congress support tax relief, but say my proposal is too big. Since they are already agreed that tax relief creates jobs, it doesn't make sense to provide less tax relief, and therefore create fewer jobs.
